

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method and system of examining resource reliability in which a data acquisition section collects a utilization performance record of a resource previously recorded in a utilization performance record storage and data on the resource stored in a Web server and stores them, and a reliability judge section judges the reliability of the resource based on the data stored in the data acquisition section. The resource with high reliability is offered based on the results of the judgment in response to a request.